

Contents

Introduction. Dynamics of Émigré Scholarship in the Age of Extremes Stefan Berger and Philipp Müller	1
Chapter 1. ‘A Private Perch’: Cosmopolitanism, Nostalgia and Commitment in the Émigré Historian’s Persona Jo Tollebeek	23
Chapter 2. The Émigré Historian: A Scholarly Persona? Herman Paul	45
Chapter 3. The Long Arm of the Dictator: Cross-Border Persecution of Exiled Historians Antoon De Baets	58
Chapter 4. Nativism and the Spectre of Antisemitism in the Placement of German Refugee Scholars, 1933–1945 Joseph Malherek	74
Chapter 5. Defending Objectivity: Paul Oskar Kristeller and the Controversy over Historical Knowledge in the United States Iryna Mykhailova	94
Chapter 6. Émigré Historians and the Postwar Transatlantic Dialogue Philipp Stelzel	109
Chapter 7. Between Integration and Institutional Self-Organisation: Polish Émigré Scholarship in the United States, 1939–1989 Kai Johann Willms	124

Chapter 8. The Unlikely Careers of Laura Polanyi (1882–1959) as a Historian: The Intersections of Exile, Gender, Class and Age Judith Szapor	139
Chapter 9. ‘From Geistesgeschichte to Public History’: The Years of Emigration of the Hungarian Historian Béla Iványi-Grünwald, Jr. Vilmos Erős	156
Chapter 10. Building New Networks: Russian Émigré Scholars in Yugoslavia Branimir Janković	173
Chapter 11. Networking in Santa Barbara, Writing History: Dimitrije Đorđević and the Comparative History of Balkan Nations Michael Antolović	188
Chapter 12. António Sérgio and José Ortega y Gasset: History, Theory and Experiences of Exile Sérgio Campos Matos	205
Chapter 13. Émigré Portuguese Historians in France, 1945–1974: New Methods of Thinking and Writing Portuguese History Christophe Araujo	224
Conclusion. New Perspectives on Émigré Scholarship and What Remains to be Done Stefan Berger and Philipp Müller	237
Index	251