

Contents

---

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction
Situating the Ethos of History Stefan Helgesson and Jayne Svenungsson	1
Chapter 1. Towards a New Ethos of History? Aleida Assmann	14
Chapter 2. The Vampire, the Undead and the Anxieties of Historical Consciousness Claudia Lindén and Hans Ruin	32
Chapter 3. History, Justice and the Time of the Imprescriptible Victoria Fareld	54
Chapter 4. Narrating Pasts for Peace? A Critical Analysis of Some Recent Initiatives of Historical Reconciliation through ‘Historical Dialogue’ and ‘Shared History’ Berber Bevernage	70
Chapter 5. Psychoanalysis and the Indeterminacy of History Joan W. Scott	94
Chapter 6. Does Time Have a Gender? Queer Temporality, Anachronism and the Desire for the Past Kristina Fjelkestam	112
Chapter 7. ‘The One Who Should Die Is the One Who Shall Live’: Prophetic Temporalities in Contemporary Colonial Brazil Patricia Lorenzoni	126

Chapter 8. Radical Time in (Post)Colonial Narratives Stefan Helgesson	144
Chapter 9. Engaged History Marcia Sá Cavalcante Schuback	160
Chapter 10. Speakers for the Dead: Digital Memory and the Construction of Identity Alana M. Vincent	175
Chapter 11. History Begins in the Future: On Historical Sensibility in the Age of Technology Zoltán Boldizsár Simon	192
Afterword Hans Ruin	210
Index	214